The Center for Bioethics and Human Dignity is an international leader located just north of Chicago, Illinois. The Center endeavors to bring Christian perspectives to bear upon the most pressing ethical and philosophical problems of our time. Through a variety of activities, the Center promotes this purpose by publishing research, hosting conferences, and mentoring researchers and students. The Center's principal purpose is to gather, interpret, and maintain a general mailing list. Information on the Center's activities can be obtained from the Center's website.

The Center for Bioethics and Human Dignity is headquartered from January until March. The Center's Contributions to the Center are tax-deductible.
